The collaboration is part of the journal's goals including Saudi Vision 2030 which encourages all students and young researchers to publish their research; new programs and new initiatives; innovative projects within medical, pharmacy and all related health sciences. Each collaborative university will send the names of nominees including the names of dean of the college and publication coordinator. All nominated universities will be posted on the journal's website as the university contributors. All researchers may contact IJPCS administrators through the university coordinator. The journal's consultation team will receive the manuscripts. The team will choose the best research for publication. The team will also help the researchers to correct the manuscript related publications if it possible. If the manuscript cannot be corrected, then the consultation team will reject the manuscript and inform the researchers.
